...while we might commend this duty by quoting innumerable examples from the lives of eminent saints, it is enough for the disciple of Christ if we say that Christ in His holy gospel has made it your duty and your privilege to intercede for others. When he taught us to pray, he said, "Our Father," and the expressions which follow are not in the singular but in the plural—"Give us this day our daily bread.""Forgive us our debts"; "Lead us not into temptation;" evidently intending to set forth that none of us are to pray for ourselves alone..."

— from the sermon "Intercessory Prayer" delivered on August 11, 1861, by Charles H. Spurgeon at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London.
